Kelly's Silent Partners

"WHAT'S the matter, Uncle Gamlin?"

Kelly Poole asked, as he entered the living room. His uncle sat glumly in his battered easychair, holding a pink racing form.

The monotonous drone of a vacuum cleaner sounded from the next room. "You hear that racket?" Gamlin asked unhappily. "And me trying to concentrate on picking a winner for today's race. This has been going on for two days now, and I'm broke, due to Fanny's eternal housecleaning."

"I see what you mean," Kelly said, grinning. "It's lucky I stopped in. I have a proposition that might interest you. I just saw Mr. J. I. Minks, and he's looking for a night watchman for his department store."

A few minutes later Kelly and Gamlin entered the outer office of J. I. Minks, where Mr. Minks' pretty blonde secretary greeted them. "I'll see if Mr. Minks is busy," she said.

"Say, Kelly," Gamlin said, watching the girl disappear into the inner office, "maybe this won't be such a bad place to work."

The door reopened and the brisk voice of Mr. Minks said, "Show them in, Miss Lupin."

Miss Lupin waved them into the office, closing the door softly behind her. Mr. Minks looked up from his work, slowly he faced them with a worried expression. "I'm glad to see you, Kelly," he said earnestly. "This must be your uncle. How do you do, sir."

"Pleased to meet you," Gamlin said. "About this job, Mr. Minks, I don't think it is quite in my line. You see, I'm a private investigator, resting between cases. I'm afraid this position would be too tame for my tastes."

"Fine!" Mr. Minks said briskly. "You're just the man we've been looking for."

"You see," he continued, "I neglected to tell Kelly that several shipments of our most valuable furs were stolen several days ago. Our last watchman quit just before it happened and we have not been able to replace him as yet. The police investigation of the theft led to the Curley Wolf gang, but now they think it was an inside job."

"In fact," Mr. Minks said unhappily, mopping his pudgy face, "they think I am robbing myself to collect the insurance."

"That's different," Gamlin said importantly. "I'll be glad to help you out, Mr. Minks, on the condition that I have an assistant."

"Anything to get to the bottom of this," Mr. Minks said readily. "Whom do you have in mind?"

"My nephew, Kelly," Gamlin said. "I feel it only fair to give him the benefit of my knowledge as long as he arranged this meeting."

As they left Mr. Minks' office, Miss Lupin smiled pleasantly and held out a folded slip of paper. "This note was brought here by a little boy, Mr. Poole, while you were seeing Mr. Minks."

Kelly took the bit of paper and opened it outside. Scrawled in pencil was the warning: "If you want to keep healthy, don't take that watchman's job."

He turned the note over to Uncle Gamlin, saying, "There's no use trying to find the boy who delivered it. You go on—I want to see Mr. Minks for a couple of minutes."

The department store that night was gloomy, full of frightening noises, with lurking shadows leaping up in the light of the electric lantern Gamlin carried. "Stick close to me, Kelly," he whispered nervously. "I don't want anything to happen to you."

"We better check that shipment on the third floor," Kelly reminded him. "Mr. Minks said there are over two-hundred-thousand-dollars' worth of platinum fox furs there."

"What were you doing so long this afternoon when you went back to see Mr. Minks?"

"I just wanted to look over the store to get the lay of the land in case of trouble," Kelly answered.

"Very commendable idea," Gamlin said. "I wondered if you'd do that without my telling you. If you stick with me, you may become a great . . . Oops! What was that?" Gamlin shouted, tripping full length and dropping the lantern.

The lantern went out in the fall, and the two men groped in the pitch darkness to recover it. "I hope it isn't broken," Gamlin said weakly. "I'd hate to have to find my way out of here in the dark."

"There's a light switch over by the elevators," Kelly said. "I checked on it this afternoon. It lights the whole floor."

"Then why are we fumbling around in the dark?" Gamlin complained.

"Because," Kelly explained, "we'll never catch any crooks with the place lit up."

Gamlin felt gingerly on the floor for the lantern. His hand struck an object, and he ran his hand quickly over it. "Great Scott, Kelly!" he chattered. "There's a body on the floor, stiff as a board. That's what I tripped over."

Kelly struck a match and held it up high. "Aw," he muttered in disgust, "it's only a clothing dummy that fell over." Then, spotting the fallen lantern, he picked it up and strode to the elevator.

"Whew!" Gamlin gasped, hurrying after his nephew. "It had me worried for a minute." At that moment, the click and hum of an elevator in motion came down the shaft. "There is someone else in this building," Gamlin gasped. "If it's the Curley Wolf gang, we'll be massacred. There are at least ten thugs in that mob. Where'll we hide?"

"We won't hide," Kelly replied firmly. "We'll face them right here."

"Are you crazy, Kelly?" his uncle asked. "It's ten to two, and those odds are too much, even for me." While he was still speaking, the elevator jarred to a halt and the doors slid open. Standing in the elevator, guns leveled, were a group of sinister-looking men. In the center, stood a slim, blonde girl with sea-green eyes.

"Miss Lupin," Gamlin gasped, "those crooks have captured you!"

"No," Miss Lupin replied, laughing. "we have captured you. I see you didn't take my warning note to heart. Now you will not get off as easily as the watchman who took the hint and quit. Meet my brother, Curley Wolf."

A tall, thin man stepped to the front of the elevator and bowed mockingly. "I'm sorry, gentlemen, that our acquaintance will be so short, but we must get on with our work. Unfortunately for you, you won't be able to tell anyone that it's my sister who tips us off."

"Let's have a little more light on the subject," Kelly said, slipping to one side. He grabbed the large switch and pushed the contacts home. Light flooded the entire floor to reveal, standing in a semi-circle, twenty grim-faced policemen, each holding a sub-machine gun, a riot gun, or a pistol.

"It's a trap," Curley snarled.

"Drop your guns, boys," Kelly ordered, "or my friends will drop you before you can make a false move." The pistols hitting the elevator floor sounded like a small avalanche.

"How did you do it," Curley growled. "We watched this place all day and tonight, and no cops came in or out."

After Kelly and Gamlin, under the cold eyes of the policemen, secured the last knot on the gangsters, he turned to the baffled Curley and replied, "Good thing you didn't look too closely at the Law." He gestured to the still unmoving patrolmen. "They happen to be clothing dummies, rigged up from the costume department. The guns," he added, "are from the toy department."

"I guess maybe we're the real dummies," Curley Wolf muttered ruefully.

SKINNY!

Give Me 15 Minutes A Day
And I'll Give You A New Body

PEOPLE used to laugh at my skinny, 97 lb. body. I was so embarrassed at my weakling build that I was ashamed to strip for sports or for a swim. Girls snickered and made fun of me behind my back. THEN I discovered my marvelous new muscle-building system—"Dynamic Tension." And it turned me into such a complete specimen of MANHOOD that today I hold the title "THE WORLD'S MOST PERFECTLY DEVELOPED MAN."

That's how I traded in my "bag of bones" for a barrel of muscle! And I felt so much better, so much on top of the world in my big new, husky body, that I decided to devote my whole life to helping other fellows change themselves into "perfectly developed men."

WHAT'S MY SECRET?

When you look in the mirror and see a healthy, husky, strapping fellow smiling back at you—then you'll be astonished at how short a time it takes "Dynamic Tension" to GET RESULTS!

"Dynamic Tension" is the easy, NATURAL method that you can practice in the privacy of your own room—JUST 15 MINUTES EACH DAY—while your scrawny shoulder muscles begin to swell... those spindly arms and legs of yours bulge... and your whole body starts to feel "alive," full of zip and go!

No "ifs," "ands," or "maybes." Just tell me where you want handsome, powerful muscles. Are you fat and flabby? Or skinny and gawky? Are you short-winded, pepleps? Do you hold back and let others walk off with the prettiest girls, best jobs, etc.? Then write for my FREE Book about "Dynamic Tension" and learn how I can make you a healthy, confident, powerful HE-MAN.

Thousands of other fellows are becoming marvelous physical specimens—my way. I give you no gadgets or contraptions to fool with. When you have learned to develop your strength through "Dynamic Tension," you can laugh at artificial muscle-makers. You simply utilize the dormant muscle-power in your own body—watch it increase and multiply into real, solid LIVE MUSCLE.
